Mabo – Life of an Island Man (1997)

Director: Trevor Graham

Genre: Biography, documentary

Duration: 88 minutes

Classification: Unknown

Mabo – Life of an Island Man is the story of a small island and an extraordinary man. Eddie Koiki Mabo was born on Murray Island in the Torres Strait, but lived most of his life in exile. Only after his death did the island wholeheartedly welcome him home. By then the island and Eddie, between them, had changed the legal and political landscape of Australia. On June 3rd 1992, six months after Eddie Mabo's tragic death, the High Court of Australia upheld his claim that Murray Islanders held 'native title' to three islands on the eastern fringe of the Torres Strait.

Putuparri and the Rainmakers (2015)

Director: Nicole Ma

Genre: Culture and society; documentary feature

Duration: 97 minutes

Classification: M

Putuparri and the Rainmakers is a universal story about the sacred relationship between people and place. It takes audiences on a rare and emotional journey to meet the traditional rainmakers of Australia's Great Sandy Desert who have fought a twenty-year battle to win back their traditional homeland. The film spans ten transformative years in the life of Tom 'Putuparri' Lawford as he navigates the deep chasm between his Western upbringing and his growing determination to fight for his family's homeland. A trip back to his grandparent's 'country' in the desert begins the process of cultural awakening. Putuparri is shocked to learn that the dreamtime myths are not just stories, that there is a country called Kurtal and a snake spirit that is the subject of an elaborate rainmaking ritual.

Cleverman (2016)

Director: Wayne Blair

Genre: Drama/Sci-fi

Duration: 6 episodes of 60 min

Classification: M

With an 80% Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cast, Cleverman sets the benchmark for diversity on Australian television, and its contemporary themes set in the near future will resonate widely amongst various audiences. Cleverman's narrative is couched squarely within Australia's divisive asylum-seeker situation and challenging colonial past. The series depicts a deeply conflicted and anxious society, fearful of a minority group, endowed with extraordinary physical traits, living among them. One young man – The Cleverman – struggles with his own power and the responsibility to unite this divided world, but he must first overcome a deep estrangement with his older brother. Carefully gathering Dreaming stories from around Australia – with permission from elders to re-tell them – creator Ryan Griffen's aim was to "put 60,000 years of old stories in a modern context, and keep them rooted in culture".

Utopia (2013)

Director: John Pilger and Alan Lowery

Genre: Documentary

Duration: 110 min

Classification: M

Director and journalist John Pilger first visited the Aboriginal community of Utopia in Central Australia three decades ago during the making of The Secret Country. He returned in 2013 to film Utopia and discovered things hadn't improved. Families live in third-world conditions, in poorly sanitised shacks where they are plagued by easily curable diseases. Extended families of 16 to 20 people living in the one house, a house which has been identified by government officials as an asbestos hazard. This is Aboriginal Australia now—the most abject poverty you can imagine in one of the wealthiest countries in the world. Utopia documents the saga of suffering, dispossession, alienation, racism and poverty suffered by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples in contemporary Australia.

Toomelah (2011)

Director: Ivan Sen

Genre: Drama

Duration: 106 min

Classification: MA

The film is set entirely in the remote Indigenous community of Toomelah, located on the New South Wales- Queensland border. The community was created as a mission during the 1930s, bringing together Gamilaroi and Bigambal people from the surrounding area. Toomelah centres on Daniel, a ten-year-old boy who dreams of being a gangster, and intimately depicts mission life in contemporary Australia. The film reveals the challenges facing the young Gamilaroi people of the Toomelah Community—robbed of much of their traditional culture by Government policy and struggling for an identity. It is a provocative and yet comic story that transports audiences inside the community, evoking an authentic world and way of life.

Tales from the Daly: 'Naiyu Nambiyu' (2011)

Director: Steve McGregor

Genre: Documentary

Duration: 20 min

Classification: G

Tales from the Daly: 'Naiyu Nambiyu' is a cinematic journey into the lives and Country of the Traditional Owners of the Daly River region in the Northern Territory. During the months of October to May the region is lashed by monsoonal storms. Legend says it is the Sugar Glider travelling across the sky mischievously moving the clouds around which brings the rains. The beauty and power of these storms takes the audience to the heart of the landscape. But within this beauty lies danger. Children are told stories to teach them respect for the bush and how to be wary of its dangers. The Wabuymem—a little grey spirit that lives in the Banyan Tree—is one of these stories. The Wabuymem stalks children and lures them away from their families into the Banyan Tree to

Contact (2009)

Director: Bentley Dean and Martin Butler

Genre: Documentary

Duration: 78 min

Classification: PG

In 1964, Yuwali was 17 when her first contact with whitefellas was filmed. Contact is her story and it brings together two vastly different civilisations—the last remnant group of Aboriginal peoples still living traditionally in Australia's Great Sandy Desert, and Space Rocket Research. Set against the countdown to the launch of the Blue Streak rocket test, authorities are sent to clear the potential crash zone of inhabitants and capture their extraordinary first meeting with Yuwali's group in 16mm colour film. Yuwali's account is probably the fullest and most revealing of the 'first contact' experience ever caught on film. Now in her sixties, Yuwali is a natural storyteller, who gives a riveting personal account of her first contact with the twentieth century and the moment in time

The Apology (2008)

Director: Sarah Spillane

Genre: Documentary

Duration: 30 min

Classification: G

The Apology to the Stolen Generations by the Australian Parliament on 13th February 2008 was a powerful and memorable moment in the nation's history. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and non-Indigenous people alike. The film begins two days before the historical event as people began to gather in Canberra and captures the anticipation on a thousand faces as Prime Minister Kevin Rudd delivers the Apology, and then the spontaneous outpouring of emotion all around the country.

It includes interviews, stories and many moments including the first Welcome to Country in the Federal Parliament. Jack Thompson's narration, Shelley Reys' thoughtful commentary and the music of Silverchair, John Butler Trio, Missy Higgins and the Stiff Gins all help make this film a truly uplifting experience.

Director: Martin Mhando

Genre: Documentary

Duration: 70 min

Classification: M

Liyarn Ngarn, in the Yawuru language of the West Kimberly region around Broome in Australia's far north-west, means "coming together of the spirit". It epitomises a thirty year-long mission of Indigenous leader and Yawura man, Patrick Dodson, to bring about a lasting and true reconciliation between the original owners and the immigrants. In this compelling documentary personal stories of injustice are recounted by renowned English actor Pete Postlethwaite, as told to him by Patrick Dodson and Bill Johnson. Respected songman, Archie Roach, adds his powerful lyrics and voice to this often painful, yet inspiring, journey of strength. Liyarn Ngarn aims to change perceptions and attitudes to Indigenous peoples and to assist with the process of true and lasting reconciliation.

Kanyini (2006)

Director: Melanie Hogan

Genre: Documentary

Duration: 53 min

Classification: PG

Kanyini explores the philosophy and the life of Bob Randall—an Aboriginal man from Mutitjulu, a town beside Uluru in Central Australia. Bob Randall is a 'Tjilpi' or special teaching uncle of the Yankunytjatjara people and a member of the Stolen Generations. At about age 7, Bob was forcibly taken away from his mother and family under government policy. Like so many, he grew up alone, away from his family, and never saw his mother again. No records were kept of the Aboriginal nation, family name, or identity of the Aboriginal children who were stolen. Young Bob was kept in government institutions until he was 20, when he was banished for questioning white authorities. After many years of heart-wrenching searches, he found his roots and returned to his mother's Country, where he lives today in Mutitjulu. Throughout his life, Uncle Bob has worked as an educator and leader for equal rights, land rights, environmental protection, Indigenous cultural awareness and preservation, and community development. Uncle Bob co-produced and narrated this award-winning documentary.

When Cameron Doomadgee was found dead in the Palm Island police station, his injuries were like those of someone who'd been in a fatal car crash. The police claimed he had tripped on a step. The Palm Islanders rioted and burnt down the police station. The subsequent trial of Senior Sergeant Chris Hurley – who had been decorated for his work in Aboriginal communities – made headlines day after day, shadowed by Queensland police threatening to strike. The Tall Man tells the gripping story of the trial, of the complex Senior Sergeant Chris Hurley, and of the Doomadgee family as they struggle to understand what happened to their brother.

NATIONAL RECONCILIATION
WEEK 2019 27 MAY - 3 JUNE

GROUND in TRUTH WALK TOGETHER WITH COURAGE

Duration: 99 min

Classification: M

Black and White is a compelling story based on a 1959 landmark trial that irrevocably changed police procedure and judicial authority in South Australia. An excitable young lawyer, David O'Sullivan, is given the news that he has drawn a 'bad lottery prize' – a legal aid case. He must defend a young Aboriginal man Max Stuart who has been arrested for the rape and murder of a nine-year-old girl in the far west desert town of Ceduna. O'Sullivan soon concludes that the Stuart has been framed by the local police and decides he must take a stand. O'Sullivan and his legal partner, Helen Devaney, embark on a 'David and Goliath' battle that threatens the world of closed ranks, hidden evidence and the establishment.

One Night the Moon (2001)

Director: Rachel Perkins

Genre: Drama/Musical

Duration: 57 min

Classification: M

Set in 1932 outback Australia, One Night the Moon is based on a true story about an Aboriginal police officer and "black tracker" named Albert. The film focuses on a family who have lost their child and stubbornly refuse Albert's help in their desperate search. The "family" is enacted by one taken from real life—singer Paul Kelly, actress Kaarin Fairfax and their daughter Memphis—lending a certain authenticity and urgency to this historical tale, told through sung dialogue.

Recommended audiences:

- Individuals and friends (over 15 years-old)
- Community groups
- Businesses and organisations
- Schools and early learning services (professional learning and upper secondary)

How to access:

One Night the Moon is widely available for purchase on DVD.

Babakiueria ("Barbecue Area") (1986)

Director: Don Featherstone

Genre: Satire/Mockumentary

Duration: 30 min

Classification: PG

Babakiueria uses role reversal to satirise and critique Australia's treatment of its Indigenous peoples. Aboriginal actors play the colonisers, while white actors play the Indigenous Babakiuerians. The filmmakers have fun presenting Australian cultural stereotypes like the barbecue and football as strange 'native customs' seen through the eyes of an ethnographic observer, presenter Duranga Manika. According to director Don Featherstone, the question of how to portray both black colonisers and white colonised was the subject of a lot of discussion during development. Ultimately, rather than involving any profound representation of their respective cultures, the transposition is literally skin deep—black people colonising a land of white inhabitants. This satirical examination of black-white relations in Australia first screened on ABC TV in 1986 to widespread acclaim with both critics and audiences alike.

The Secret Country: The First Australians Fight Back (1985)

Director: Alan Lowery

Genre: Documentary

Duration: 55 min

Classification: G

The Secret Country: The First Australians Fight Back is a 1985 television documentary made for the British Central Independent Television company by writer/presenter John Pilger. It details the persecution of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples throughout Australia's history. The film shows that when British colonists first arrived in Australia they saw Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples as having no proprietary rights to their land because they didn't cultivate it. As a result of this, no treaty was ever signed. Indigenous peoples had no rights under British colonial rule and much of their resistance to British colonisation wasn't recorded. John Pilger aims to document some of the historical struggles of Aboriginal peoples as they were driven from their lands, as well as some of the major events relating to Aboriginal rights throughout the 20th century. Reflecting on the film, Pilger says: "The Secret Country was my first film on Indigenous Australia. I look at it these days and what shocks me about it is that virtually nothing has changed.

"I knew almost nothing about the first people of my own country until I left Australia in my twenties and went to London to work. My London newspaper sent me back to Australia to find out the secret and shocking truth."

NATIONAL RECONCILIATION
WEEK 2019 27 MAY - 3 JUNE

GROUND in TRUTH WALK TOGETHER
WITH COURAGE

Director: Alec Morgan

Genre: Documentary

Duration: 54 min

Classification: G

Lousy Little Sixpence tells the story of Aboriginal children, now Elders and representatives for an entire generation, who were stolen from their families by the Australian government and turned into unpaid servants for white families. The title refers to the amount of pocket money the indentured workers were supposed to be given - but never received - while their wages were managed by their 'employers', on behalf of the Aborigines Protection Board.

Lousy Little Sixpence is an influential film in highlighting the injustice of stolen wages, and the fight for the rightful payment to be made to Indigenous peoples of that generation or their families. Through old newsreels, archive film, photographs and interviews with Elders, the film weaves a moving account of a hidden history, the early struggle for Aboriginal land rights and self-determination.

- Businesses and organisations
- Schools and early learning services (professional learning, primary and secondary)

Two Laws (1981)

Director: Carolyn Strachan and Alessandro Cavadini

Genre: Documentary

Duration: 140 min

Classification: NA

In this four-part documentary series, an Aboriginal community from the remote Northern Territory tells the story of their people through their own eyes. The Borroloola people were in control of the filmmaking process, so their history unfolds through their own storytelling conventions and focuses on the issues most important to them, such as land rights. The result is a fascinating film series that not only pushes the boundaries of documentary, but also challenges the stilted style of ethnographic filmmaking so often found on television. The concept of two laws – colonial and Indigenous law – can also be understood as two ways of storytelling or filmmaking.

Jedda (1955)

Director: Charles Chauvel

Genre: Drama

Duration: 91 min

Classification: PG

Jedda is perhaps Charles Chauvel's best film, as well as his last. It is historic both for being the first colour feature film made in Australia, but more importantly, because it is arguably the first Australian film to take the emotional lives of Aboriginal peoples seriously. When an Indigenous woman dies in childbirth, the baby is raised by Sarah, the wife of station owner Doug McMann. Doing their best to assimilate the child into white society, young Jedda (played by Rosalie Kunoth-Monks) is caught between two cultures – forbidden from learning about her Indigenous heritage and never fully accepted by the other. As a teenager, Jedda is drawn to a mysterious newcomer called Marbuck (played by Robert Tudawali), a tribal man in search of work and offering a new perspective on life.
